LURKING somewhere in the makeup of every normal person, there is an impulse to have a hand in the planning and tending of things that grow. The concentration of population in large cities and the resulting apartment buildings limit the yielding to that impulse, but each year sees a large increase in the number of people who indulge their desire for garden making even though it may be only to the extent of a flower box in the window.

More and more people are learning that they may enjoy the most important advantages of a garden without any tremendous outlay of money.

In any garden from the very simplest to the most formal type, man-made accessories play a very important part in showing off nature's handiwork to its best advantage. House and garden are so intimately associated with one another that the problems of garden design including its fittings are necessarily architectural, and it was only natural that this company which for nearly 35 years has specialized in the designing and building of architectural specialties should branch out into the planning and execution of architectural garden accessories. Beginning in 1890 this company played an important part in the construction of the famous world's fair buildings. The garden furniture department was added seven years later and the classic designs of Greek and Roman architecture which for centuries have delighted the world have been carried over into the present day designs intact or modified in keeping with the various recognized periods of designs.

Early in this work the need was felt for a material more easily worked and handled than natural stone. Immediately experiments were begun which resulted in the development of Art Stone whose characteristics permit of easy reproduction of famous masterpieces of sculpture with all the sturdy vigor and weather resisting qualities of natural stone. The adaptability of Art Stone to the uses of garden decoration, together with its durability, led the South Park Commissioners of Chicago, to use it in beautifying Grant Park, photographic examples of which are shown on pages 2 and 3. In this park there are fountains, ornamental stairways, and over one thousand feet of balustrades.

The E. J. Lehman estate of Lake Villa, Illinois, considered Art Stone to have such merits that it was used for a fountain and pool, the coping around the garden, and a number of vases.

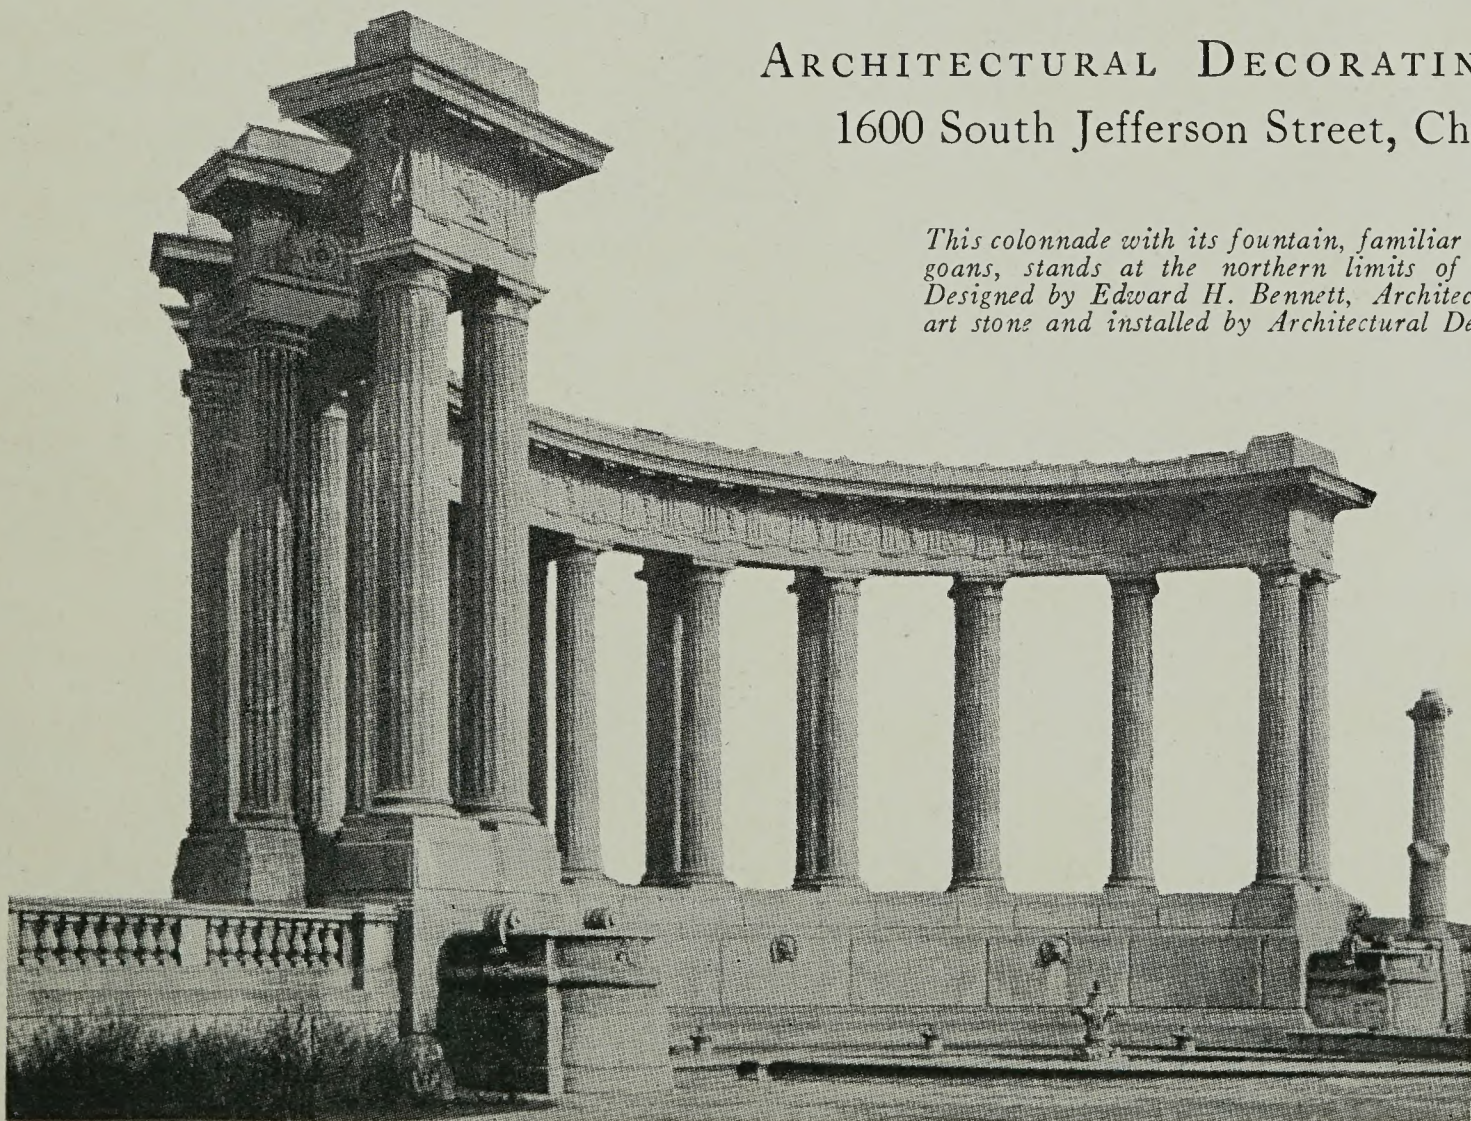

While this booklet shows a great many different models and types of garden furniture and accessories, a carefully worked out garden scheme often requires pieces specially designed to match. If so we are prepared to execute them.

Our Service Department gladly gives assistance in selecting articles for a small garden requiring only one or two pieces. From that we are prepared to render intelligent cooperation to landscape architects and owners in the design and execution of the architectural furnishings for large formal gardens and estates or public parks.

We welcome an opportunity of help in the betterment of gardens be they large or small. Address inquiries to the Service Department.

Arrangement of Garden Furniture

BY C. DUDLEY WAGSTAFF

Landscape Architect

THOSE who are natively endowed with artistic talent appreciate art in its various phases to the fullest extent. Not, however, because they are thus endowed; but rather because the natural tendency has stimulated them to study.

There exists even in those who, through lack of desire or opportunity, have failed to study art, a certain elemental appreciation of all things beautiful, which they have acquired unconsciously through comparative observance. Therefore we may assume that, disregarding natural talent, appreciation of art and even ability to execute may be acquired and is within reach of us all.

I will apply this theory to the arrangement of garden ornaments and accessories which is a part of the fine art of landscape gardening. The ability to arrange garden furniture so that it enhances the loveliness of the entire garden may be acquired through observation and training.

Since architectural ornaments in gardens are so often hopelessly misplaced, it is the purpose of this brief outline to offer guidance for the disposition of some of them.

First, I do not consider as garden furniture the cast iron reindeer, imitation tree stump, and similar objects. They are oddities and monstrosities, and their exclusion from this list needs no explanation.

The placing of a piece of garden furniture in the midst of an open lawn can no more be justified than the placing of a similar object in the middle of a room. Pieces placed in this position, monopolize rather than adorn, and detract attention from the beauty of the area as a whole.

The tiniest garden need not be without a bathing and drinking place for birds.

The pedestal bird bath of stone or imitation stone is most desirable, and should be placed well toward the shrub border of the lawn.

The contrast of a gracefully designed bird bath outlined against the background of rich green shrubbery is very effective.

The beauty, majesty, and historic interest of the sun-dial make it one of the most desirable of garden features. This most ancient of timepieces should be placed in an open position where the sunlight may play unobstructed upon its dial. Accompanying this article is an average suburban home. You will note that in this plan the sun-dial is used as the central point of interest in the small formal garden.

From mythological origin we have, as garden ornaments, the Hermae. They are excellent pieces of garden statuary composed of beautifully tapered pillars surmounted by heads which now vary in character, but which originally represented the god Hermes. This piece is best placed against a high wall of shrubbery, thrown in a clear relief against a wall of evergreens, or in a niche shaped for it in a solid green hedge.

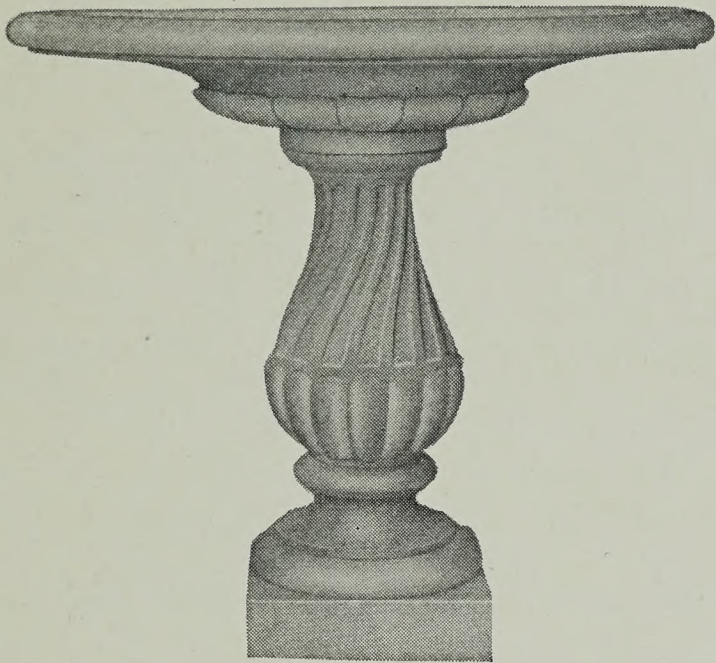

The garden seat has its place in a widened space at the side of a garden path, at the end of a path, 'neath the cool shade of a lawn tree, or some other desirable vantage point in the garden where we may rest and admire the many beauties surrounding us.

To suggest in general the location of a summer house or pergola is rather difficult. The walks in and around a garden area must have an objective point. The summer house is sometimes located as this objective. As you will note in the accompanying design, the pergola is placed at the rear of the private lawn area, on an axis with the main path of the formal garden, and terminates the vista through the garden.

Let us, by caring for our gardens, by selecting well-designed garden accessories, and placing them effectively, cause our outdoor retreats to "invite to occupancy." Let us have an outdoor living room where "all the privacy and lounging indolence of indoors is possible out under the blue in the fragrant sweetness of a true garden."

Bird Baths

One of the most popular uses to which art stone has been adapted is the bird bath. Whether used as part of a definite garden design or simply placed in a convenient spot near the trees, nothing adds such an interesting feature as a bird bath; for the songsters quickly avail themselves of the opportunity for relief from the heat and dust. If there are any song birds in your vicinity, it will not take them long to find and use your bird bath. It is a well known fact that the inroad of insects rapidly diminishes in gardens where provision is made for martins and other birds to bathe and house themselves. It offers an interesting diversion and a pleasant means of instructing children in the characteristics of the feathered inhabitants of their own part of the country.

The designs illustrated here give a wide variety from which to choose.

Benches, Chairs and Tables

Cool and inviting against the dark green of the garden's foliage, an art stone chair or bench offers a restful retreat from the heat of a midsummer's day. A nearby table of the same material provides a convenient place for magazines and cooling drinks. Skillful placing of the designs shown on this and the four following pages, add a note of strength and dignity which greatly enhances the effect of any landscape effort. Once installed, any of these pieces will be a source of constant gratification for generations to come.

Gazing Globes

An heritage from the mystic East, the Gazing Globe and its pedestal of classic design have come to lend a romantic touch to a garden spot. It may be employed in a large number of ways, ranging from the central figure of a small group to a final touch of decoration in larger gardens. The globes come in ten and twelve inch diameter. They are made of the finest crystal glass, heavily silvered so that they reflect an interesting picture of the surrounding landscape. The prices quoted on pedestals include globes of correct diameter.

For the more practical minded nothing gives so much pleasure as a garden telescope. A powerful magnifier; requires no care or attention after it has once been set up. always ready to study the stars or watch the birds and animals from an undisturbing distance. In the olden days before the invention of and use of watches, the sun-dial was undoubtedly the central figure of both the formal and the unconventional garden. Now-a-days its function is almost purely ornamental, although it often retains its position as the objective point of the garden.

The pedestals shown here have a variety of designs which add a note of distinction to any garden.

In ordering, always state where Sun-dial is to be used, giving county and state, so that dial will be correct for the latitude. In setting the dial it must be placed so that the center of the noon mark is pointing to the true north (not magnetic), with the stile or gnomon perpendicular, inclining neither to the right nor left. As the declination or deviation of the compass from the true north varies in different localities and at different times, we furnish correct reading for your latitude when desired.

Fountains

Nothing adds so much even to the smallest garden as a pleasing bit of water, and the installation of a fountain has long been recognized as one of the easiest methods to create quiet, restful atmosphere which should be the ambition of every garden builder. Fountains lend themselves to every imaginable sort of garden treatment, ranging from the simplest to the most formal. There are types best suited to be used in pools, others for lily ponds, and still other designs for the open lawn in the more formal garden. The models illustrated here follow closely the most approved classic designs which have gained the admiration of thousands of visitors to the old villas near

Rome; for from Italy come the finest examples of the best use of water in adding to the charm of gardens. From Frascati in the Alban hills near Rome, from the old villas of Tivoli in the Sabine hills and from the Villa d'Este have come a variety of beautifully sculptured designs employing urns and shells and tritons and dolphins and other figure subjects which have their origin in ancient mythology.

Art stone lends itself beautifully to the classic lines of the Italian masters as well as providing a material which only improves upon exposure to the weather. ## Wall Fountains

These pleasing adaptations from the drinking fountains of the ancients have a wide range of practical as well as ornamental uses. They may be effectively employed inside the home, especially in sun rooms, as well as in the garden where they find attractive settings on brick or stone walls. Here again the desirability of art stone is clearly shown and the possibilities of its employment in every kind of design, ranging from the simplest bowl on up to a complicated design in deeply carved motifs.

On pages 59 and 60 are sections with measurements for these fountains. Any further information will be furnished upon request.

Flower Boxes

Art stone is not a good conductor of heat—a highly desirable feature for flower boxes, because it enables the plants to retain their moisture for a much longer period. Plants kept in art stone vases or flower boxes have every opportunity to grow and flourish. The types shown here cover every use for floor boxes, porch ferneries, hanging on walls and supported on pedestals. All flower boxes are provided with drain holes in the bottom, but they may be placed in the sides if desired.

Pedestal Vases

For adding a colorful bit of contrast complete in itself, a pedestal urn is one of the most effective. It may be employed singly or in pairs, marking off certain areas of open lawn or on porches at the head of balustrades; in fact, in almost a limitless range of positions. The designs shown here follow the best practice in combining the urn shapes with the more purely architectural design of the pedestal.

Vases

Where color effects are needed nearer the ground, or where there is already plenty of height such as wall tops, these urn designs will be found very effective. There is no easier way to add interesting decorative spots, for the pieces themselves have beautiful lines. Flowers and foliage plants may be used according to the season.

Hermæ

Originally these pieces always carried the head of Hermes, from which the name is derived, but for many years they have carried a wide variety of heads. These pieces may be used in a wide variety of ways, ranging from single pieces standing above, to newel posts for balustrades. In the small garden they serve admirably in the place of more complicated, more expensive pieces of statuary.

Light Pedestals

For driveways, for entrances to estates, for porches and other outdoor uses we have designed some special lighting pedestals as illustrated on this page.

Globes and Fittings Are Not Included with Lamp Standards

Balustrades

The above balustrades are examples showing another use of Art Stone. As sizes of sunken gardens, porches (or wherever balustrade can be used) are not standard, it is not practical to select stock designs for same. Our Service Department can plan your work if measurements are sent us. Approximate prices can be furnished upon request.

Instructions

The articles listed in this catalogue are made light gray in color. However, it is possible to match many of the common varieties of stone used for building purposes, such as granite, red or yellow sandstone. If you have any stone work you wish to have matched, send us a sample with your order and we will endeavor to duplicate it in Art Stone.

Vases and Flower Boxes are provided with drain holes in the bottom, but they can be placed in the sides when so specified.

In ordering any article listed in this catalogue, state first the quantity desired, then the catalogue number of the design selected.

Should the problem before you call for unusual treatment, we shall be glad to submit special designs, which may be more appropriate than those shown in this catalogue.

Our products in Artificial Stone are carefully and securely packed in strong boxes for shipment.

Any design shown in this catalogue can be made of Special Art Stone Material for interior at ten percent over net price. When interested write for sample No. 1 or No. 6.

Whenever granite finish is desired add ten percent over net prices. All prices F. O. B. Chicago.
